
Management problems of specialists target oriented training in Bauman Moscow State Technical University

© E.V. Zelentsova, N.F. Zelentsova

Bauman Moscow State Technical University, Moscow, 105005, Russia

The paper studies the matters of target oriented training of specialists needed by governmental institutions under market economy conditions as well as the matters of managing activities to provide the appropriate quantity and quality of prospective student body enrolled to study at the university. The results of Information Science and Control Systems Faculty student body monitoring at Bauman Moscow State Technical University in order to study the degree of students' adaptation to studying in the University are given, which make it possible to optimize this process and provide recommendations on the organization of the University's activity in general education institutions involving school pupils and teachers as well as on target oriented specialist training activity planning inside the University.

Keywords: information science, control systems, personnel training, professional identity, monitoring, academic activity, target oriented training.

Zelentsova E.V., Senior Lecturer of the Information Protection Department, deputy dean of Information Science and Control Systems Faculty on target oriented training at Bauman Moscow State Technical University. Author of over 20 papers in the field of education management. e-mail: katez@mail.ru

Zelentsova N.F., Ph.D., Assoc. Professor of Engineering Pedagogics Department at Bauman Moscow State Technical University. Laureate of the Russian Federation Government Prize in education. Author of over 100 papers in the field of education management. e-mail: pedagog.zel@gmail.ru
