
Review of remote non-contact detection methods and identification of hazardous substances

© A.V. Novgorodskaya

Bauman Moscow State Technical University, Moscow, 105005, Russia

Briefly describes the main methods of non-contact remote detection and identification of hazardous substances in the air and on the surfaces of bodies, have already passed the test in real conditions. The advantages and disadvantages of each method, justified the most preferred areas of application.

Keywords: spectroscopy, detection methods, contactless laser, hazardous substances.

Novgorodskaya A.V. graduated from Bauman Moscow State Technical University, Department of Gyroscopic Instruments and Devices. Senior Lecturer of the Department of Physics Bauman University; also works at Center for Applied Physics of Bauman University. e-mail: soullll@yandex.ru